Search Ended For Bodies Of Lake Accident

Driver of Car Thought To Have Been Alone; Search Abandoned

Divers have been busy dragging the botton of Crystal Springs Lake for the bodies of two persons believed to have been drowned when Samuel Harris, 29-year-old bank clerk of San Francisco, fell with his automobile into the lake last week. The search was abandoned Wednesday when it was decided that Harris was alone at the time of the accident.

Motorists noting a broken rail along side of the road at a point where it joins the bridge across the Crystal Springs dam, and evidence that a car had gone through the rail at that point, notified the sheriff's office here.

Persons who made a preliminary investigation could find no trace of an automobile and concluded that it must have slipped partially down the bank and that it had been recovered. When Sheriff McGrath found evidence that a car had hurtled into the water from the bank above, divers were called for and a thorough search of the lake bottom was begun.

Investigation revealed that the car driven by Harris, a Hudson coach, hurtled over the bank after ripping through the rail, and crashed a boulder about half way down the embankment From this point it must have rebounded high into the air in order to strike about 75 feet out from the shore, said the sheriff.

The car was loacted with the driver in it about 60 feet beneath the surface of the water. Harris' body was removed with considerable difficulty. It was then believed that two or more persons might have been with Harris, but as the bodies have not been found after several days of searching, and no evidence has been found to substantiate the belief, it is thought that he drove down the peninsula alone.

Before leaving the bank in San Francisco, where he was employed, he said that he was going down the peninsula to spend the week-end.

Funeral services are to be held in San Francisco for Harris today.

Briefs Filed In W. P. Application

The Peninsula Industrial Conference, through its attorney, H. M. Wade ,on Wednesday filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission its brief in favor of the granting to the Western Pacific of permission for the construction of its proposed peninsula line.

Among representations in the Peninsula brief are tables showing relative growth of industry in the east and west sides of the bay and comparative prices of acreage available for industrial development on both sides of the bay.

The brief also sets forth the necessity for the Western Pacific line under the general heading of public need. It is contended that the port of San Francisco justifies direct rail service on the Peninsula, which it is alleged will shorten present service from three to five hours.

It is also contended that the line will make large vacant areas available to industry and that this is a crying need of San Francisco. Benefits to the entire state and to the nation also will result from beteer Peninsula rail service, since this service will foster development of San Francisco as one of the important ports of the United States, it is stated.

Briefs favoring the granting of the required certificate were also filed this week by the California Railroad Commission.

CHILDREN TO TAKE PART IN CALIFORNIA PAGEANT

The pupils of Mt. Carmel School will present a pageant of the history of California on Thursday afternoon, June 12, at the Sequoia Theatre, at 2:15 o'clock.

The entire program will be a colorful portrayal of California. Spanish dancers, Indians, Cowboys, Argonauts, and even the California poppies will not be wanting.

PRIZE WALTZ DANCE OF CLUB FRIDAY NIGHT

The second of the series of prize waltz dances under the auspices of the Redwood City Social and Development Club will be held this evening in the Foresters Hall. Eight couples were selected at the first dance of the series held last month and eight more will be selected this evening. The dances are attracting large crowds from all parts of the peninsula.

The final dance of the series will take place on the evening of July 4.

Sunnyvale Site Gaining Favor

The site at Sunnyvale which is being considered as a proposed dirigible base by the United States government, received its greatest boost at the hearing now in progress at Washington from the testimony of Lieutenant-Commander C. E. Rosendahl, recognized as one of the greatest authorities on dirigible operations.

Lieutenant - Commander Rosendahl in his argument for the site on the peninsula as opposed to the proposed site at San Diego cited 15 reasons why the peninsula site would be superior to that in the south. Among these were:

Dust and water conditions at Camp Kearny make it unsuitable, and Rosendahl said it was doubtful whether the situation could be corrected.

Camp Kearny and the entire San Diego area is served only by two railroads, one of which runs through Mexico for a part of the way, and the other runs for seventy miles along the beach of southern California. It would be possible to cut off supplies for all naval activities in southern California, but because of superior railroad facilities in the San Francisco bay region this could never happen at Sunnyvale.

The old bugaboo of fog was taken up, and from Pacific Coast pilot charts of many years' standing Rosendahl showed that there is 1 per cent more fog for a year at Golden Gate than there at Point Loma, off San Diego. Sunnyvale has twenty more clear days a year that Camp Kearny.

It is inconceivable that the fleet would be off San Pedro in time of war. It wil be in and out of San Francisco and Puget sound only. The San Francisco area will be indisputably of greater value to the navy than San Diego in time of war.

Boy Scouts Enjoy Meeting on Beach

Troop 105 Boy Scouts held their last meeting before vacation last night at their salt water bathing beach near Smith creek. A feed of "hot dogs" and toasted buns was thoroughly enjoyed after the swim and an old fashioned "snipe" hunt was indulged in. The latest additions to the troop were accorded the privilege of holding the sack. The boys will be watching the tide schedule this vacation and many good times are predicted. Last year at the end of the vacation every boy in Troop 105 had learned how to swim.

San Carlos Bonds Win At Election

The bond issue which was voted upon by the people of San Carlos Tuesday, and which had for its purpose the construction of several culverts on Pulgas creek in San Carlos, and for the construction of a bridge across Cordilleras creek to connect San Carlos with Redwood City, passed by a large vote. There were 242 votes cast for the proposed issue and only 13 opposing votes.

The concrete bridge across Cordilleras creek will be on Stanford Lane. Half of the cost of this structure will be borne by Redwood City, funds for this purpose having been voted in a bond issue here at the municipal election.

The other improvements made possible by the San Carlos bonds will be for culverts across Pulgas creek at Elm, Arroyo, Cedar and Chestnut streets. These were necessary to make the site of San Carlos' new $60,000 school accessable to the greater portion of the city.

Dr. McGovern Seeks Re-election

Welfare Work of Official Is Praised by Friends Who Will Aid His Campaign

Dr. J. C. McGovern, San Mateo County Coroner, will be a candidate to succeed himself in the office to which he was appointed three years ago, it was announced today by officials of the McGovern Club, with headquarters in South San Francisco. Branches of the club are being organized in San Mateo and Redwood City, it was announced.

Andrew Hynding, first mayor of South San Francisco, and a pioneer business man of the county, is among those sponsoring the campaign of Dr. McGovern. Mrs. E. C. Peck, past president of the San Mateo County Federation of Women's Clubs and for many years a leader in social service work, is also among the founders of the club sponsoring Dr. McGovern's campaign.

"All those who know of Dr. McGovern's work for public welfare will rally to his support," said Mrs. Peck. "He was the founder of the first free dental clinic for school children in California, a movement which has spread over the entire state, since he inaugurated it in South San Francisco twenty years ago. For years, Dr. McGovern gave his services in this endeavor and the clinic is still maintained by him.

"He was the first to see the need for a Community Chest in San Mateo County and was the organizer of the chest at South San Francisco twelve years ago. He was the first president and has continued in this office ever since the chest was established.

"Dr. McGovern was also on the first social service commission of San Mateo county and served for years without remuneration of any kind. During the war he gave up his practice to devote practically all his time to a Dental Clinic for soldiers and sailors. This also was without remuneration."

Hynding also pointed to the candidate's record. "Dr. McGovern formed the first troop of Boy Scouts in the northern part of San Mateo county and has always been an active leader in this work," said he. "He has served continuously as troop committee man, since the founding of the Scout movement at South San Francisco in 1918, and has also served on the San Mateo County Court of Honor Committee.

"Since he assumed the office of Coroner, appointment of deputies has been made equitable and the county has been districted to eliminate conflict of jurisdiction. Dr. McGovern has standardized the timing of inquests, thus speeding up the work of his office and saving the time of deputies and much expense to the county."

Dr. McGovern, a graduate of the University of California, is a native of San Mateo county, born at Halfmoon Bay, where his father, the late Patrick F. McGovern, settled in 1857. He attended Lowell High School, San Francisco, before there were high schools in San Mateo county, and when Governor C. C. Young was a teacher at Lowell. He is a brother of the late Sheriff Thomas C "Brick" McGovern.

Dr. McGovern has never before been a candidate for any county office, having been appointed in 1927 to succeed the late Dr. W. C. Brooke.

Mr. Reed had been ill several months with heart trouble which was the cause of his death, at the age of sixty-four.

The card party which was to have been given this evening by Post 105 American Legion, has been postponed one week. It will be held next Friday in the War Memorial hall. The post will hold a dance in the same hall on Saturday, June 21.

Search Fails To Find Body of S. S. F. Youth

14-Year-Old Boy Drowns Playing On Improvised Raft on Bay

Search was being continued yesterday for the body of Virgilio Anda, 14-year-old boy of South San Francisco, who was drowned Monday, while playing on a raft on the bay.

The boy with some other children had been playing with an improvised raft. He was alone on the raft when a sudden gust of wind shoved the frail craft off shore into the bay. Finding himself about 2000 feet from shore, the boy became panic-stricken and jumped into the water.

Attempts to save the drowning boy were made by Miss Virginia Adler, 20-year-old daughter of the superintendent of the U. S. Naval Radio Station at South San Francisco; and by Douglas Sherwin, 18, of South San Francisco, but the Anda boy had drowned before he could be reached by help.

Three Candidates File for Election

Nomination papers of three more candidates for office were filed with the county clerk on Wednesday. They were for Edward Farrell, justice of the peace at South San Francisco, to succeed himself in office; for Congress, Arthur M. Free; and for Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction.

Free's nomination papers in this county were sponsored by G. H. Stern, Burlingame, republican, and Laura Lane, Burlingame, democrat. Those of Kersey were signed by Roy W. Cloud, secretary of the California State Teachers' Association. The first candidate to file for re-election in this county was State Controller Ray L. Riley.

Divers sent down by Roy Fowler, city engineer of Santa Cruz, have found that one of the big sewer outlet pipes in the ocean 2000 feet off Vue d'l'eau, in west Santa Cruz has broken and shifted. At the time the outlet sewer was laid, two parallel pipes were laid in the ocean. One has shifted and broken several hundred feet offshore. The old pipe will be repaired, saving about $45,000. The work will be done by divers.

A test case to determine if irrigation projects can be forced to install fish screens at headgates to protect fish, was under way in Superior Court at Willows, attracting attention of sportsmen and irrigation project officials. N. B. Scofield, head of the State Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, testified that water diversion projects have reduced the Sacramento River salmon catch to one-fifth of what it was twenty years ago.

Mustering out of Battery E, 143d Field Artillery at Livermore, was ordered by Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt. This National Guard unit will then be mustered in at Santa Barbara, along with $500,000 worth of equipment. Disbandment of the Livermore outfit was ordered because of lack of sufficient personnel. Adjutant General Mittelstaedt also ordered promotion of Private A. C. Harlander, 159th Infantry, Oakland, to second lieutenant.

In construction of its marvelous system of highways, California leads Western states in the development of that great agricultural and industrial area west of the Rocky Mountains. This is the opinion of O. S. Warden, Great Falls publisher and chairman of the Montana State Highway Commission. Warden was enthusiastic over California's highway development program, but stated that Montana was increasing its system despite the numerous seasonal and mountain handicaps. He said: "At present Montana is following an extensive development program on highways, for we realize there that through good roads and easy means of access will the state profit in advertising and industry. With these new highways, we will have new outlets in connecting the farming and mining districts of the state with the great shipping centers of the Pacific Coast, particularly San Francisco."

Safety modifications in the Mulholland dam near Hollywood are contained in a new application for State approval filed with the State Engineering Department, it was announced by State Engineer Edward Hyatt. The dam lies immediately above Hollywood and its safety has been the subject of much investigation. Under the new law directing the State to pass on safety of all dam structures, Los Angeles requested approval for Mulholland dam several months ago. The new application proposes material strengthening of the dam.

Here is an array of Dartmouth students showing how shorts may be adapted for wear on every occasion. The revolt against the conventional trousers is sponsored by the college paper. These students are showing how shorts may be worn for school, in the autumn, for afternoon wear, for study, for formal occasions, "pour le sport," for semiformal attire and for the campus.

Joan of Arc Ceremony in Orleans

With surplices and cassocks fluttering in the breeze and being dampened by a drizzle, high churchmen participated in a religious procession through the streets of the ancient town of Orleans, France, to commemorate the immortal Joan of Arc. In the background may be seen the historic cathedral of Orleans where the Maid is said to have paused for prayer.

POULTRY

CULL LOAFER HEN EARLY IN SEASON

Nonlayers Kept Until Fall Bring Very Small Price.

A hen sold in June will bring in more than a hen sold in October, poultrymen often say.

To test the truth of that statement, particularly as it affects culling the loafers, poultry extension specialists at the Ohio State university present this example on the basis of last year's prices:

"A Leghorn hen weighs four pounds She was worth 28 cents a pound or $1.12, on June 7 last year. On October 11 this same hen was worth 19 cents a pound, or a total of 76 cents. She was worth 36 cents less simply because of a lowering of price. It would be necessary to make a profit of 36 cents on that bird in the four months from June to October to pay for her depreciation in value."

Prices generally go that way every year, the university poultrymen point out, hence the necessity for culling the loafer hen early.

"Another reason," says Paul Zumbro, one of the specialists, "is that culling lowers your feed costs. That Leghorn hen would eat approximately 25 pounds of feed in the four months, which would cost from 60 to 70 cents.

"The hen stops laying the first of June. She is not sold because the flock owner is too busy, or it is thought she will lay later in the summer. Summer comes and the hen is still out of production. October comes and the hen is sold to make room for pullets. On this one hen the poultryman has lost 36 cents for depreciation in price, and 60 cents for feed."

Daily Feed for Young Ducks Varies Greatly

The amount of feed needed each day for young ducks varies as much as does their growth. Their growth averages a half pound a week, and to make this increase of weight each week requires an additional quantity of feed over the preceding one. The rule is, feed each meal what they will eat up clean with a relish, and do not allow them to linger over the feed trough.

It is better they should have not enough than too much, as they will be in a much better condition to relish the next meal. One thing is considered to be of as much importance as the feed, and that is removing the feed left over and thoroughly cleaning the troughs after each meal. This is scrupulously attended to by successful duck raisers.

Inexpensive Shed Is Suitable for Ducks

Any shed will do for a duck house provided it is draft proof. It does not have to be very warm. It would be a good idea to have a concrete bottom which should be covered with shavings. A few shavings should be spread in the corners so as to give the ducks a dry bed.

For ten ducks and a couple of drakes a house ten feet square would answer. If it were 12 by 20 it would be much better. You could build a shed roof and have one or two windows occupying about one-fourth of the south elevation. It would be well to have these windows slide up or down or sideways, keeping them open a little bit at all times even if it is cold, for ventilation.

Poultry Hints

More revenue from farm flocks is obtained from eggs than from broilers or roasters sold.

* * *

Hatching eggs need careful handling. Eggs that become chilled and wet are not likely to hatch well.

* * *

Owners should not attempt to raise chicks in makeshift quarters, as the results will not be satisfactory.

* * *

Ventilation in the poultry house must be secured without drafts.

* * *

After the usual crop of broilers goes on the market, the prices are materially reduced as compared to the ones that are developed from the early hatched chicks.

* * *

Try the sanitary plan this year: Healthy chicks, disease free ground, brooder stove in disinfected brooder house, balanced feed in self feeders, brooder house and equipment kept clean throughout the season.

* * *

If the farmer and his wife took as long a vacation as the average farm hen the bankruptcy law would soon be overworked.

* * *

If the turkey hen is to be allowed to hatch her own eggs, the nest should be made where it can stay through the hatching season.

* * *

Inbreeding is risky with turkeys, yet males should be bought from the same strain each year, provided it is a good strain. Each strain introduces new tendencies and qualities.

* * *

In the laying house, there should be at least three square feet for each pullet, four or five square feet if the house is small.

* * *

Cod liver oil should not be fed to broilers the last two weeks before marketing. It taints the flesh with the odor of the oil.

* * *

Wire platforms may be used for chicks—but only when the range is infected, or the space limited. The system is expensive and involves a good deal of labor.

DOORMATS VERY MUCH OUT OF FASHION

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

JENNIE TURNER finished ironing the eleventh pair of rompers and hung them carefully on the clothes bars along with the others. The small kitchen was suffocatingly hot and the steam rising from the dampened garments had moistened Jennie's fine gray hair and plastered the fabric of her blouse close to her thin arms and shoulders. Her upper lip showed the pallor of overexertion. It was four in the afternoon and she had been up since five.

Her daughter called from the cool veranda where she sat sewing and watching Junior take his afternoon nap in the porch swing. "Mother!" Jennie obeyed. She appeared, fluttering, in the doorway.

A woman sat on the steps with a basket beside her. She was small and slight and her attitude had the slump of fatigue and discouragement.

"Why, Imogene!" Jennie said.

"I'm going up on the hill for a picnic supper and I want you to go, too," Mrs. Wilcox said.

"Why—" Jennie fluttered still more. She glanced at the downcast face of her large, healthily colored daughter. "What do you think, Julia?" she pleaded.

"Have you got the ironing done?"

"All done. And there's potato and meat to warm up for supper."

"Well, go along if you want to."

"You needn't do a thing. I've got everything here in the basket," Mrs. Wilcox said.

A look of pleasure had arisen to Jennie's gentle face. She slipped off her apron and soon was ready.

Silently the two women toiled up the hill road until they came to a little grove and a rock much frequented by picnickers. It was already occupied. A woman sat with her back to them gazing at the view.

"Why!" Jennie gave a little cry, "I believe it's Miss Packer."

The woman heard and turned to look at them. Surprise invested her large dark face.

"You're welcome," she said. "I don't want only enough ground to sit on. I'm dead tired."

"You look it." Jennie sank down upon a stone.

"So do you," Miss Packer retorted. "As for you, Imogene, you look not only done out but sick."

"It's that pain in my shoulder again," Mrs. Wilcox sighed, finding a seat herself. "But I shouldn't be here if Angeline and Robert and the kids hadn't gone to Riverdale for the day. After I got the work done up I decided I'd come up here and bring my supper. I haven't been here before in—I don't know when."

"Nor I," Miss Packer said. "That's why I'm here now. The whole crew at my house is going to the church supper. My niece has company—a couple of girls from Riverdale. I didn't want anything to eat, but I did want a little rest and quiet—that view is beautiful, isn't it?"

"Grand," Jennie gazed wistfully at the array of blue mountains in the distance. Imogene's eyes, dwelling upon the same expanse, were greedy. She devoured it as one possessed of a great hunger who didn't expect soon to be filled again.

Some time passed while the three women sat there, their tired faces turned to the blossoming west.

Jennie Turner lived with her daughter, for whom she did the work of a servant, although without any pay but her food and shelter. Imogene Wilcox lived with her son's family and similarly paid her way by working all that she was able. Miss Packer was independent, for she had means of her own, but she lived with her married sister and was no better off than the other two.

"Well," Imogene said, suddenly turning to her basket, "I guess we'll have a bit of supper. You're invited, Miss Packer. There's plenty for the three of us."

The food and the quiet heartened the three women.

"It has just occurred to me," Miss Packer said, "that doormats have gone out of fashion."

"Doormats!" Jennie laughed a little. "What do you mean?"

"I mean that we are doormats, the three of us, and we are behind the times." Miss Packer's dark face was grim. "Here am I so tired I can't breathe waiting on my sister's company, while I've got money enough to take care of me anywhere. Alice is perfectly able to hire somebody to do all I do, but so long as I give of my services she will accept them."

"Doormats!" murmured Imogene. "I just don't get your idea."

"Doormats," said Miss Packer, "are things that other folks wipe their feet on. I'm awful tired of living the way I do. Aren't you, Jennie?"

"Well, duty—" began Jenny timidly.

"Duty is a one-way bridge," retorted Miss Packer. "Your first duty is to yourself. You are wearing yourself out carrying that great, heavy Junior around."

Jennie flushed and tears came to her eyes. She knew.

"And you, Imogene," went on Miss Packer, "are carrying round a pain in your shoulder just because your poor right arm is never still a minute. Oh, what's the use?"

She got up, walked a few steps and stood in a contemplative attitude.

"Right here is where I am going to build my bungalow," she said. "I can buy an acre of ground from Mr. Arnold; he's been trying to sell this piece a long time. There will be a kitchen and a living room and three bedrooms, and a porch that faces the sunset and another porch toward the hill where we can eat our meals—"

"We?" gasped Jennie.

"We three. I invite you and Imogene to come and live with me. You Jennie, can raise raspberries and hollyhocks; Imogene, you can make fruit cake and angel food for the women's exchange. As for me, I"—she laughed almost gayly—"I'll cook a new kind of stew every day. I love stews, and my sister won't have one on the table. Otherwise, I'll loaf and invite my soul."

"Do you mean it?" Imogene inquired.

"You will see. And, remember, no doormats allowed."

At that they all laughed like girls. The first snow of winter fell upon the secure roof of the hillside bungalow, wherein three women lived in increasing happiness and joy.

About All

Jefferson Bascom, mining expert, was talking to a New York reporter about dude ranches. He said:

"Some of these places are swell joints—full evening dress every night, latest Paris frocks and high jinks."

Mr. Bascom laughed reminiscently.

"I remember a retired officer, Colonel Dash," he continued, "who disapproved of the high jinks and daring toilettes at a certain dude ranch where, one night, a fearless New York girl in a beautiful evening gown climbed on to a wild bronco and was immediately unsaddled.

"The joke is on her," I said to Colonel Dash.

"'It is,' he replied with a sneer. 'And that is about all, too.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Trained

During the celebration that attended the publication of his one hundredth novel, E. Phillips Oppenheim said:

"I inherited what talents I possess from my father, who, although he never published anything, was a very clever story teller. He used to have each of us children write a story to be read aloud at Christmas, and as we were never allowed to vote for our own stories he always won the prize.

"That is, until one Christmas, when, at the age of thirteen, I was the winner. I shall never forget my father's astonishment or how very pleased I was with myself."

Canals of Bruges

The imaginative traveler will find new delights in the scenery of Bruges as seen from its canals. From a boat in these calm waters new aspects of the old Belgian city can be discovered. The waters reflect their shores so beautifully that it is no exaggeration to say that on them one sees every sight twice—towers, houses, trees, and cool arches of old bridges. The view from beneath the old Bridge of the Lions, built in 1627, frames the vista of nearby gables and the distant tower of St. Jacques in the soft green trees. Swans float out in the twilight and add much to the idyllic quiet of the scene.

Oceans' Levels

The mean level of the Pacific at the Isthmus of Panama has been found to be about eight inches higher than the mean level of the Atlantic. In the month of February the levels are the same, but throughout the rest of the year, on account of current, tidal and wind influences, the mean level of the Pacific ranges above that of the Atlantic. It is as much as one foot higher in October.

Ants Not Only Gather, but Even Grow Grain

Did you know that among these wonderful insects called "a people" by Solomon, there are some who are expert farmers?

These ants—there are two species—collect the seeds of various plants in autumn and store them in granaries underground. Some special treatment by the ants hinders the germination of the seeds, though they are in a situation favorable to sprouting, and when the ants are prevented from having access to their granaries, germination takes place almost at once. Nothing is done to sterilize the seeds, for when it suits their purpose a portion of the stock is allowed to sprout, but only under control, as a maltster sprouts his barley, sufficiently to cause the transformation of the seed's starch into the sugar. Root and stem are then bitten off and the seeds are dried in the sun to be used later as a food.

Several Indian ants have similar habits, but the go-ahead agricultural ants of Texas and Florida have improved upon the ancient methods of the Old-world harvesters; the Americans not only harvest grain, but grow it first. On an area of about four yards in diameter surrounding the main entrance of their nest they exterminate with their jaws every plant other than the so-called ant rice, which thus becomes a pure crop and, in the absence of all competition, flourishes. These ants have also a clear idea of the importance of facilitating transport by making broad, straight roads through the bush and keeping them clear of encroaching weeds. Some of their grain stores are said to be at a depth of 15 feet below the surface, apparently in order that seed shall not be subject to the influence that normally brings about germination when they wish. These agricultural ants have two classes of workers—major and minor—the majors conspicuous owing to their big heads and capable jaws, with which they crack the hard grain for general consumption.—P. B. Prior in Our Dumb Animals.

BASEBALL PLAYERS ARE ENTERTAINERS

So Says Art Shires of the Chicago White Sox.

"What is this, a kid?" asked Art, "the Great" Shires, White Sox first baseman, when informed that a baseball fan in Chicago had brought court action to have all base ball players pronounced insane.

"There's a lot of fellows like to kid us. They come out to the ball park and get a great kick out of kidding us. A lot of them don't know what base ball is all about; they just come out to pan us.

"I don't care. I don't mind how much they kid me or razz me. I figure we're out there to furnish entertainment for them. We're actors, after all. If they like to kid us, I'm willing. I'll kid them right back.

"A lot of people just come out to be entertained, and we're supposed to furnish the entertainment for them. I'll bet out of 10,000 fans who come out to the games, there's 500 who don't know what it's all about."

It's surprising the way that fellow Danny Boone continues to play good baseball and there ought to be a law against it. Years ago he was a member of a championship St. Paul team and recognized then as one of the most able infielders in the league.

Here he is holding down third base for Columbus, a batter dangerous with runners on base, and a fielder who, despite his aged legs, holds up his end rather well.

Danny always has been a fighter, somewhat impatient of the other's mistakes and making very few himself. There's no telling how long he may last.

Much of the credit for the surprising success of the young University of Illinois ball team this spring belongs to Capt. McGraw, taking a tip, placed a few dollars on a good-looking thoroughbred. The finish was unusually close, and as the horses neared the home stretch it was evident that the race would be decided in those last paces.

John McGraw became very excited, and as the horses neared the finish line, he shouted to his nag, "Slide!"

Those two are the class of the Michigan team.

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

The strategy of baseball! We hear much of it. What part does the so-called inside stuff play in the winning of pennants? It is all largely a matter of exaggeration. True, strategy plays a definite role, but it is not nearly so important as some of the experts would have you believe. Super-pitchers and timely batters form the greatest strategical combination in the world. Let me explain by going back to the days of Ty Cobb, then managing the Detroit Tigers.

The score is a tie, there is a runner on third, one out and Babe Ruth, the original "Sultan of Swat," is at the bat. It is the last half of the ninth and a base hit or a long fly by Ruth means the ball game. Detroit is the opposing team. The Yankees and Tigers are bitter rivals. The situation is a precarious one for the Cobb men, for busting up ball games is the Babe's specialty.

The first pitch is just to Ruth's liking; he takes a terrific cut at the ball and drives a long fly that clears the right field fence but is foul by inches.

Manager Ty Cobb races in from center field. The umpires are doing a lot of gesticulating, waving their arms at Cobb in an effort to keep him from running in from the outfield and delaying the game. There is no stopping him however. He reaches the pitcher's box and is soon in heated conversation with the twirler.

"Inside stuff," says the fan, "Cobb is telling him Ruth's weakness, just where he should pitch to him." Cobb finally goes back to his position.

The next two pitches are wide of the plate and the umpire rules them balls. Then comes one to Ruth's liking and he connects for another long foul. This causes the catcher of the Detroit club and the first sacker to hasten over to the pitcher's box and engage the mound artist in torrid conversation.

"More inside stuff," says the fan, "that pitcher isn't working right on Ruth. He gave him one in his 'groove.' Looks as if it would be necessary to tell that guy where every ball should be pitched."

Ruth finally walks after getting the count to three balls and two strikes. The Tigers managed to retire the side without further scoring and won the ball game in the next inning.

"Strategy won that game for Detroit," says the fan. "Walking Ruth saved the day. If the Tigers had let the big fellow hit instead of passing him, he would have broken up the game."

"Strategy of the diamond." That feature of baseball has been stressed in fact and fiction. The inside stuff in every sport is invariably greatly overplayed, and so we hear much of the so-called strategy of the national pastime.

In the game that I have mentioned between New York and Detroit, here is what Ty Cobb probably said to his pitcher after his hasty trip from centerfield.

"Well of all the dumbells, you win the brown derby. How many times have I told you never to pitch fast and on the inside to Ruth? If you do it again it will cost you fifty bucks. Make him hit a bad ball. Nothing good to him. He can't do any harm on first base. Walk him unless you can make him bite at a bad ball."

When the Detroit catcher and first baseman went into session with the pitcher, the so-called inside stuff was very likely along these lines:

"You must have a date for this evening the way you are working; take your time, keep Ruth waiting. The more anxious you make that big guy the less liable he is to bust up the ball game," or—

"You must be a friend of Ruth's the way you are pitching to him. That's two you have slipped him right in his 'groove.' You ought to be wearing a New York uniform."

So after this when you are at a ball game and you see the catcher confer with the pitcher, or when the game is delayed by the entire infield congregating around the twirler, don't let your curiosity get the better of yourself. All that glitters is not gold. Incidentally, all the merry persiflage that is being slipped to the pitcher is not inside stuff.

Shortstop Insured

The San Francisco Seals are taking no chances with their young shortstop star, Frank Crosetti, whom they expect to sell to major leagues for "big-time money." Secretary George A. Putnam announced that Crosetti had been insured for $100,000.

He is the first player ever insured by the coast league outfit, although Willie Kamm, Chicago White Sox third baseman, was insured for $125,000 while still playing for the San Francisco club.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Arms of the Venus di Milo

THAT the Venus di Milo, undoubtedly the most beautiful statue in the world, once had arms is apparent from the most superficial glance, but in what position they were sculptured and what became of them are mysteries which take first rank among the secrets of the art world.

Some experts, basing their statements upon accurate measurements of the stumps of the missing arms and the manner in which the muscles appear along the back of the statue, claim that the right arm was gracefully posed and attached to the draperies around the waist, while the left arm was raised at the shoulder and bent at the elbow—suppositions which are supported by the meager reports concerning the statue when it was first discovered on the Island of Melos in the Mediterranean.

But the first of the mysteries concerning the Venus is connected with the origin of the statue. Who was the sculptor? It is doubtful if this will ever be revealed for, while it has evidently been buried for some 2,000 years and it bears traces of the characteristic handiwork of any one of several famous Greek sculptors, the identity of the man who made it will remain forever a secret unless some unsuspected evidence is discovered, throwing light upon this question.

The modern history of the Venus goes back about a century when Yorgos Bottonia, a peasant living on the Island of Melos, was working in a field on the side of a mountain. Bottonia was quarrying some stone and accidentally came across a species of vault. Excavating further, he was amazed to discover the figure of a woman, larger than nature and radiant with the beauty of the immortals.

Who had sealed her there? Why, for some twenty centuries, had that marvelous form been a captive of the dark, standing motionless and unhonored? Had the statue been stolen and secreted or had it been hidden in order to save it from the hands of vandals? These questions, like the others which concern the Venus of Melos, must also remain unanswered.

When old Yorgos found the statue—or so the story goes—it was complete and unharmed. What was more, it was made of two superimposed blocks, joined at the waist, while the left arm could be detached from the shoulder to which it was cunningly fixed by an iron tenon.

Shortly after the discovery, however, a French vessel stopped at the Island of Melos and a young ensign started on a tour of discovery for something out of the ordinary. He heard of the Venus and at once sought out Yorgos. A bargain was struck and the statue was to pass into the hands of the ensign as soon as he could produce the purchase price agreed upon—a sum absurdly small when the real value of the statue is considered. The French vessel then sailed for Constantinople where the French ambassador was informed of the treasure and, in a few days the secretary of the embassy was sent to Melos to complete the transaction.

When he arrived he found that the primates of the island had arranged to present the statue to a certain Greek prince, whom they desired to placate. A French warship had been dispatched to Melos to bring the statue away with it but, when she anchored in the harbor on May 23, 1820, a Greek ship flying the Turkish flag was already at the dock and a party of Greek and Turkish sailors were preparing to load the statue on the Greek boat. Both French and Turkish sailors were landed and a fight ensued for possession of the treasure, the French being victorious.

When the melee was over and the French vessel sailed for Piraeus, it is said that the Venus bore irreparable wounds. But this is part of the secret which surrounds the statue for, as the story of the affair did not come to light until nearly half a century later, the details could never be substantiated and there is more than a suspicion that the statue was broken during its trip on the warship and that the story of the fight was concocted in order to explain the mishap. In fact, the only undisputed points about this famous statue are that it was discovered on the Island of Melos and that it now stands, broken but magnificent, in the place of honor in the Louvre at Paris. All the rest is conjecture, rumor and mystery.

The Malady Fascinating

The following letter was recently received by a city health officer from a colored woman who had been attending his clinics:

"Dear Sir: I have been ill, so bad to forfeit two treatments, but hope you will excuse me, for my ability to walk was very questionable, seemed as though my knees were captivated with rheumatism, the tension of the cords seemed obtrusive. Truly—."—Health News.

Device Prolongs Tones

The crea-tone is a device to prolong tones on the pianoforte. Its principle is said to be based on catching the normal vibration of the string after the hammer has set it in motion and prolonging the tone electrically while the key is depressed. It is the invention of Simon Cooper, Brooklyn scientist and engineer.

First American Steeplechase

The first steeplechase was run at Paterson, N. J., June 7, 1865, a three-mile handicap, over 27 jumps, though the real beginning was an extra day's steeplechasing at Jerome park in November, 1869.

Advantages of Latin

Language students have found that anyone who understands Latin reasonably well can master the romance languages in about one-third the time that a Latin-less person can.

DAIRY

WARM MILK BEST BACTERIAL HOME

High Counts Usually Result of Dirty Utensils.

"Bacteria get into milk only from the things with which the milk is handled," said Prof. J. D. Brew, to visitors at Cornell university. "Proper barn construction and equipment merely adds to the possibilities of making clean milk."

Bacteria grow in many liquids, and milk happens to be the most ideal of all. Like any other plant, provided with enough food and moisture, they grow rapidly at warm temperatures, and most of the exceedingly high counts are the result of growth due to poor cooling.

The next important cause of high counts is improperly cleaned utensils. Usually the greatest bacterial contamination comes from the more or less invisible parts of any utensils of equipment.

About 1 to 2 per cent of all miscellaneous high counts are due to udder infection. Often udder troubles are apparent, but at times an unsuspected udder is causing the high count.

Dirt falling into the milk may also add numerous bacteria. The numbers added, however, depend upon the source of the dirt.

To produce milk with bacterial count consistently under 30,000, requires greater vigilance in operations. No chances whatever should be taken.

There is no excuse, in general, for counts being in excess of 100,000. It can be safely assumed that with efficient cooling of milk and proper cleaning and sterilizing of all utensils, at least 98 per cent of the counts should be under 100,000.

Brushes Preferred in Washing Milk Utensils

Brushes are to be preferred to rags for use in washing dairy utensils, because they get into corners and crevices much better. The brushes should be carefully washed and allowed to dry, in the sun if possible, between the times when they are in use. A sour brush will often leave the utensil in a worse condition than before it was washed, causing the same vile, sour and musty odors to develop in the utensil that were present in the brush or rag.

All milk or cream utensils should be rinsed first of all with cold or lukewarm water. This step should never be omitted, for hot water introduced directly into milk vessels coagulates the albumin of the milk, forming a sticky layer over the surface which is very difficult to remove. The utensils rinsed as indicated should then be washed thoroughly in hot water containing a high grade of washing powder. The powder readily dissolves the layer of fat on the utensils, which is very difficult to remove in any other practicable way. The utensils should then be sterilized with steam or chemicals and allowed to dry thoroughly without the use of towels of any kind.

Use of Dry Skim Milk in Raising Dairy Calf

Many experiment stations have been working during the past few years on the use of dry skim milk in raising dairy calves. All are agreed that it is practical to do so where whole milk is sold at considerable premium over butterfat prices. Professor Bohstedt of the Wisconsin Station states that they have done sufficient work to be convinced that dry skim milk has a place in the ration for growing dairy calves. A bulletin has just been issued from the University Farm at St. Paul, Minnesota, on raising the dairy calf when whole milk is sold.

Dairy Notes

Don't allow dairy cows and laying hens to become fat.

* * *

Ground barley, fed with silage and hay, has been proved to be good feed for calves.

* * *

Practically every cow that holds a world's record of production is a large cow for her breed. Stunted calves make undersized cows.

* * *

Butter-fat prices, much lower than usual, have led some dairymen to try economizing by not using cottonseed meal where needed to balance the ration, or feeding native hay instead of alfalfa. This is poor economy.

* * *

High producing dairy cows frequently suffer a severe strain on their calcium reserve and need to have that reserve replenished.

* * *

Hay for dairy cows should be cut early. This applies to all hays but seems more important in the case of timothy and other grasses.

* * *

More food value per acre is obtained from pastures when they are not grazed too early or too closely. Early pastures, even though they are bulky, supply an abundance of protein.

* * *

The average farm does not have the equipment for effectively sterilizing dairy utensils. Chemical disinfectants can be prepared at small cost which will successfully sterilize utensils.

* * *

Dairymen face a period of readjustment According to the 1930 agricultural outlook report, an annual increase of about 1 per cent in milk cow numbers is necessary to meet consumption demands. In 1929 the number increased 3 per cent and there are 3 per cent more heifers than a year ago.

Making Roads Safe For Democracy

Evey person who runs an automobile thinks he knows a lot about safety and the best methods to regulate traffic. But with all due respect, he doesn't! That's why several hundred "experts" from different states and cities have been meeting in Washington. At the very opening of their session they were told by President Hoover that "steadily increasing traffic has outrun all measures of safety." He, with other high government officials emphasized the need for safety measures, pointing out the traffic fatalities are steadily rising, both in their actual number and in their ratio to the number of motor vehicles.

The conference was the outgrowth of engineering attention and organized educational efforts which have been working steadily and getting beneath the causes of trouble for the past three years. There are hopeful signs that a new code will be adopted in all of the States, to make traffic and the highway regulations uniform throughout the entire nation.

Roosevelt Warns U. S. May Become Desert

The whole United States may become one vast desert, just as many districts of China have done ,unless it takes care of its forests, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt warns in an article published in the current issue of the Country Home. Paintings of Chinese districts, dating back only to about the time America was discovered, show luxuriant vegetation in districts that are now barren wastes through which wind and rain have ploughed gulleys and into these the rich surface soil has slipped. The havoc was wrought because the protecting forests have been removed, says the Governor. His plea is that farmers put more of their land to wood-lots, a movement which he had inaugurated on a big scale in New York State. The article follows the widespread destruction of forests recently in the environs of New York.

Governor Roosevelt points out that wood is one of the staples of American life and that the country is consuming five times as much timber as is grown. The annual planting of trees accounts for only five days cutting. It requires 5,000,000 trees annually to support telephone and telegraph wires, says Roosevelt, and the country's use of wood-pulp paper is 8,000,000 tons a year. The country pays $250,000,000 in extra freight because the wood supply is so far from the places of consumption.

Roosevelt urges that a conservation fund be established by citizens providing for planting trees as a "Grandchildren's Trust."

Again We Play

Recreation, with a big "R", will be America's chief pastime for the next four or five months. The strain of winter is now in the process of being entirely forgotten and those who have huged the firesides and the great indoors are now emerging for their sunshine, fresh air and the additional enjoyment of life that goes with these more healthful activities.

Every summer brings a tremendous increase in all sorts of recreational activities. There can be no question about the fact that America is health conscious to a greater extent that ever before.

Motoring, or touring, as some prefer to call it, continues on the increase. Perhaps educational desires as well as health are responsible for this. Or maybe it's a throwback from preceding generations of wanderers.

Motor boating, sailing and every other division of acquatic sports are decidedly more popular. Tennis courts, golf courses, the baseball diamond and riding paths are crowded to the hilt regardless of where you go.

All in the interest of health—health so necessary to overcome the strain and nerve-racking pace of modern life.

Some might argue that all this increased interest in sports and recreation is due not to a general realization of their health-giving benefits, but to the inherent desire for play. Such opinions certainly are conteracted by the tremendously apparent revision of eating habits. Diet is getting greater attention today than ever before.

Watch what the average business man and woman eats, the next time you invade a lunch room or restaurant. Light salads, abstinence from coffee or tea, and a general demand for light healthful desserts of the flavored gelain type are what you will find predominating

The search for health through recreation and diet has become a universal American custom. And no greater necessity exists in America today.

A Shock May Be Necessary

The people will not let democracy fall, but they must sometimes be shocked into realization of the fact that the burden of maintaining a democracy rests on them as voters rather than on the shoulders of elected officials who seem to become imbued with the idea that as soon as they gain power their chief duty is to start out to restrict the rights and liberties of the individual.

COUNTY ENGINEER RACE TO BE 3-SIDED CONTEST

W. G. Frost Enters Ring for County Office; James Already in Race; Kneese Announcement Awaited

The race for the position of county engineer will be a three-sided affair, from all indications, with Geo. A. Kneese, the incumbent, James S. James and W. G. Frost as the contestants. The candidacy of James for the office was anounced last week. In the announcement of his candidacy, James summed up his experience in engineering work as follows:

1902-1906—Education at University of Minnesota and Colorado School of Mines.

1906-1918—Member of Engineering firm, "Ingersoll, Bell and James," practicing Civil and Mining Engineering in Colorado. During this period he was City Engineer of Telluride for six years, and County Engineer for eight years.

1918-1922—General Mines Superintendent, Radium Company of Colorado.

1922-1923—Construction Superintendent, Rawley Mines, Salida, Colorado.

1923 to date—General practice of Civil Engineering in San Mateo county, California.

1925-1929—City Engineer, Burlingame, California.

This week the announcement was made of the candidacy of W. G. Frost for the same office. In making this anouncement Frost stated:

"I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the office of County Surveyor.

"I am a graduate Civil Engineer, duly registered in California; a member of The American Society of Civil Engineers; and have had 25 years active experience as an engineer in railroad, structural, irrigation, highway, city and county engineering.

"I have been a resident of this county, since 1911, and was for five years connected with the County Surveyor's office, engaged principally in highway construction.

"The present salary of the County Surveyor is insufficient to fully compensate a competent engineer for his entire time, and it is therefore necessary that he accept private work also. Legislation will doubtless soon be enacted correcting this. However, if elected to the office, I shall not accept engineering work from any source which might interfere with the proper discharge of the duties of the County Surveyor, or which in any way might conflict with the interests of the citizens of the county as a whole.

"It has come to my knowledge that a rumor is current to the effect that the present County Surveyor is furthering the candidacy of myself, or of the one who has already declared himself a candidate; this for the purpose of using one of us as a stalking horse. thus splitting the vote and insuring the re-election of himself. I state most emphatically that I am in no way involved in any such agreement, understanding or transaction.

"I am out to win."

No announcement has as yet been made by County Engineer Kneese, although it is a foregone conclusion that he will be a candidate for re-election. Kneese has been county engineer for the past 12 years, and has throughout that period conducted his office in an efficient and business-like manner. His announcement is expected soon.

The two men arrested by Chief of Police C. L. The document was filed by Assistant District Attorney Richard Bell.

Opposed To Daylight Saving

Here are some facts that I would like very much to have you to look into:

That hardy perennial, daylight saving, is about to crop up once more, this time in the form of an initiative measure to be submitted to the voters of California in November.

"The proponents of this measure always have been beaten in the legislature up to this time. Now apparently they hope to put their scheme over by opposing to the public apathy a well organized minority.

"But there must be no public apathy. This daylight saving scheme is essentially vicious. It is designed to further the interests of a small group at the expense of the public generally.

"And it is opposed in the principle by nearly every one outside and specially interested group that is fathering the plan.

"Daylight saving is opposed by every housewife in California who understands what it means; what it would mean is that the clocks would be set ahead one hour between April and October, thus also setting ahead all daily activities.

"This would bring the average family dinner hour back to 5 p. m. instead of 6, requiring the hardest work of the day to be done during its warmest period.

"It would necessitate the putting to bed of small children while the sun was yet high in the heavens and before the air had a chance to cool off. Any mother knows what that would mean.

"Daylight saving is also opposed by farmers in general, and by the dairying industry in particular. The former feel, quite justly, that we get up early enough now. The latter assert and show figures to prove that daylight saving everywhere tends to cut down the yield of milk.

"It is opposed by motion picture companies and theatre owners generally on the ground that everywhere it has been tried theatre attendance has fallen off and revenue consequently decreased.

"Who, then, favors this bill? A group of stock brokers in Los Anles and San Francisco, who wish for their own convenience to be able to set their clocks to correspond with those of New York, in which state daylight saving exists.

"If daylight saving gets on the ballot in November it should be voted down overwhelmingly."—Sacramento Bee.

The city council held a special meeting Tuesday evening to consider the tax rate for the ensuing year. Prominent citizens and taxpayers of the community sat in with the members, thoroughly discussing the all-important question of taxation. All was harmonious and an understanding was reached whereby the rate would be one dollar on the one hundred dollars of assessable property. This is a raise of fifty cents from last year's rate.

After the objects of the meeting were explained by the mayor, City Attorney Whitworth made a lengthy statement showing the condition of the city funds and setting the budget adopted by the council. He showed that it would take $1200 to run the city government for the next year, that the fifty cents rate would only bring $4200. A little over $8000 could be raised by the dollar rate. This with the fines, licenses, etc., the city probably could get by, but it could not with the former rate. It was shown that bootlegging was lagging, as the fines from that source dropped materially in the last six months.

Alexander Walker thought the tax rate could be kept at the old figure if more police officers were appointed to secure fines from traffic violators and other breaches of the law. James Armstrong thought the time would be soon opportune for the council to make its own assessment of property that with a higher valuation ample taxes would be secured to meet all emergencies. Sooner or later the council would have to adopt the method, now in vogue in all modern municipalities.

After considerable discussion on the part of the councilmen and the property owners present a rising vote was taken which showed that all favored the dollar rate. This will be adopted by the council.

The proposed new rate will not impose a hardship upon anyone. The property owner having a one thousand dollar assessed valuation will only be required to $5 more a year.

Those attending the meeting demonstrated their approval of the council's proceedings.

The death of Major General Carroll A. Devol at his pretty home on Santa Cruz avenue Tuesday at noon has caused profound sorrow in Menlo Park where the deceased had lived with his charming wife since the termination of the World war, when he retired as a major-general. He purchased the Captain Boles estate not far from Holy Cross cemetery. Advanced years and failing health and an illness that brought severe pain made his last days miserable. General Davol had a brilliant record in the army. Starting as a second lieutenant, he rose to the rank of major general. Graduating from a military school in Pennsylvania he joined the army where for nearly fifty years he rendered a splendid service. He became famous as an Indian fighter. His first service was in the Black Hills, North Dakota, where he fought the Sioux. The general also saw service in the Philippines, China, Cuba. He participated in the Spanish-American war and the World war, having held the position of quartermaster general at Washington during the last conflict.

For many years General Devol had charge of the military post at Montana. He loved that state and since retirement he spent his summers on his large stock range there. The general was a lovable man, genial and kind, possessing none of that military austerity that some times make military men unpopular. He was loved in Menlo Park by all. His wife, Mrs. Dora Devol, has the sympathy of everyone in her sad bereavement. She is the vice-president of the National Council of Catholic Women, in which organiaztion she takes an active interest, as well as in all church work.

General Devol will be buried at the Presidio with full military honors, perhaps next Monday morning, although no definite time has been set for the burial, but it is believed that will be the time. Besides his widow, the deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. George H. Brent, wife of Major Brent of Fort Leavenworth, and Mrs. A. H. Bates of New York. The funeral will take place on their arrival in San Francisco.

Sale of Horse Cause of Suit

It's a "horse" on someone, but not on him, according to George H. Edwards. Edwards this week filed suit against William S. Threlkeld and Irving H. Hellman for $2625.

In his suit Edwards charges that Threlkeld as agent for Hellman, purchased from him the mare, "Ma Belle." Later, he claims, he was unable to collect for the mare. He asks $2500 for the mare and $125 for her upkeep since March 10.

Edwards claims that after accepting the mare and exhibiting her as his own, Hellman refused to pay for her. Instead, in his absence, Edwards charges, the mare was brought to his ranch and left there tied to a tree.

Edwards took the mare in, he tells the court, fed her and gave her stable room so that she might not be a loss. Now he wants Hellman and Threlkeld to come and get the mare, pay the purchase price and the expense he was put to in boarding her.

WOODSIDE

A very interesting musical program was presented at the auditorium of the Woodside School on Tuesday evening. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Helen Huebner and was a demonstration of the musical accomplishment of the school during her year as musical director. All the piano pupils at the school took part and were assisted by the school orchestra from Las Lomitas.

Mrs. Warren Spieker, who willl leave shortly for an extended stay in Honolulu, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given last week by Mrs. Alanson Weeks at her home here.

Herman Wobber entertained a number of the directors and stars of Paramount Pictures at his hillside home last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Field will leave for the East next week and will spend the summer on the Atlantic coast. They have planned a motor trip through New England.

A garden party will be given Sunday, June 15th, at Hidden Valley, the home of Mr. Louis Welch, by the junior committee of the building fund for the San Francisco College for Women. A buffet luncheon will be served in the gardens and dancing, swimming and bridge will be some of the diversoins of the afternoon Miss Margaret Lawler is making the arrangements for the affair.

Captain W. H. Baker and his wife and daughter, Dorothy, of Baltimore, were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Blackington. Captain Baker is captain of the Santa Cecelia running between San Francisco and Atlantic ports through the Panama Canal and is an old school chum of Mr. Blackington.

The graduating exercises of the Woodside School will be held at the school auditorium on Friday morning at ten thirty. The school has made a special study this year of the California Missions and the program will be a reflection of early California history. The program follows:

1. Selections by the Rythm Band of the Woodside School.

WESTERN PACIFIC R. R. PLACES BRIEF BEFORE RAILROAD COMMISSION

Final Arguments Made in Favor of Line Along Peninsula To Connect With San Francisco

The Western Pacific California Railroad Company forwarded Wednesday to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, D. C., its brief in support of its application for authoriatizon to construct 39 miles of railroad between San Francisco and Niles, via Redwood City, thereby enabling the Western Pacific to effect all-rail entrance into San Francisco and to further the industrial development of San Francisco and the Peninsula.

The purpose of the applications involved in this case, as summed up at the close of the brief, is stated in part as follows:

To afford the Western Pacific Railroad Company a direct all-rail route into San Francisco, thereby improving the service rendered to its patrons and, of equal importance, to develop a vast industrial area along the shore of San Francisco Bay in San Francisco and San Mateo counties, adjacent to San Francisco, South San Francisco, Burlingame, San Mateo, Redwood City and other cities of the Peninsula, an area not now served by any carrier and which is suited to such development.

San Francisco is the largest city served by the Western Pacific. Its importance as a port and as an industrial community is a matter of common knowledge. Due to its peculiar geographic location it is now served by but one all-rail route, the Southern Pacific. The Western Pacific is dependent on car barges to ferry its cars to and from the city. This process is necessarily cumbersome, expensive and productive of much delay.

Competitors of the Western Pacific have spent millions of dollars building cut-offs, double tracks, bridges and other improvements resulting in a more expeditious and reliable service The Western Pacific has made no protest against any such improvement, feeling that any improvement in service whether induced by competition or by economies to be effected, is in the public interest and that any loss of its traffic which might result to it from such an improvement on a competitor's line was no valid objection to be used against an improvement tending to benefit the public

It is inconceivable that the provisions of the Transportation Act regarding certificates of public convenience and necessity were intended to protect one carrier from a possible loss of traffic due to such an improvement in an existing service, as is here proposed

In no respect does this project involve an 'invasion' by the Western Pacific of any other carrier's territory The Western Pacific is now serving San Francisco and the Metropolitan area, of which it is the center Its right to extend that service within that area has been recognized by this Commission Its right to improve the existing service is indisputable * * *

The suitability of industrial development of the territory along the west shore of San Francisco Bay, traversed by the proposed line, the need to expand along the Peninsula, the necessity of competitive rail service in the district to permit development and the utter absence of any facilities in the particular area traversed by the proposed line, are not seriously questioned

The continued existence of the Western Pacific serving northern and central California as part of a route independent of and competitive with the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe is assured by the Commission's report in Consolidation of Railroads. The necessity of rounding out the Western Pacific with adequate feeders and terminals is, therefore, increasingly important. No matter how well constructed or efficiently operated a railroad may be, its full usefulness depends on adequate terminal facilities and access to the sources of traffic, through its own feeder system.

The present project, which is a part of the effort which the Western Pacific has been making for the past few years to build up an integrated, self-sufficient system, present, therefore, in addition to the local needs of the communities immediately affected, considerations of public convenience and necessity, the importance of which is very great

Obviously, if the Southern Pacific can prevail in its position and prevent improvements on the lines of its competitors, the competition that will remain will be wholly ineffective and the presence of competitive routes of no more practical benefit than is the theoretical right of the shipper to divert traffic from the originating line where joint fates exist under the so-called 'open-door' policy

We submit that these applications have been justified from every conceivable standpoint of public convenience and necessity, that the new line will effect improvements in the existing service of the Western Pacific in the San Francisco switching district, that it will open to development a large area suitable and needed for industrial uses, that it is favored by the communities affected and by the State of California because of the benefits to be derived from its construction and is opposed only by a competitor who seeks to preserve to itself the advantages of the only all-rail access to San Francisco and to prevent others developing a territory which it is itself unwilling to deevlop

The brief re-affirms the willingness of the Western Pacific to accept a condition which would permit any other railroad having a main line trackage of 250 miles or more to use the proposed line between Niles and San Francisco as a bridge route to reach terminals at San Francisco which they may own or acquire

An offer made by the Southern Pacific to itself transport traffic for the Western Pacific between Niles and San Francisco in lieu of the construction of the proposed line is declared in the brief to be inadequate and made "to frustrate the accomplishment of the desired improvement while ostensibly offering means for its accomplishment. Objections to this offer, stated by President H. M. Adams of the Western Pacific at the hearing on the applications in April, are quoted in the brief as follows:

"First, it definitely and probably finally excludes the Peninsula industrial area from the benefits of railroad competition which their respective representatives have testified is so important to the attainment of the development to which that district is adapted;

"Second, it prevents the accomplishment of the full measure of improvement in service which would be obtained by the construction of lines as applied for;

"Third, it definitely excludes the Western Pacific from all possible opportunity to assist in the development of the improved industrial area along the Peninsula or participate in the benefits of such development;

"Fourth, it prevents the Western Pacific from attaining the benefits of additional traffic in the San Francisco switching limits which would follow the improvement of service from the construction of the proposed line;

"Fifth, it would result in turning one of the most important items of Western Pacific traffic over to the absolute control of its principal competitor entering or leaving the terminal and if interruption or delay occurs it would most seriously interfere with the accomplishment of scheduled movement of the traffic"

A Pair of Life-Savers

A. M. DUVAL

O. M. HARDESTY

ON Labor Day Line Foreman A. M. Duval and Gang Clerk O. M. Hardesty, American Telephone & Telegraph Company employees, while on a motor trip from La Grange to Louisville, Kentucky, came upon the scene of a serious accident just after it had occurred. A coal truck operated by Coleman Yates, a seventeen-year-old lad, had been struck by a railroad train on a grade crossing near O'Bannon, Kentucky, and the youthful driver pinned under the wreckage.

Realizing that no time must be lost, Duval and Hardesty pulled the unconscious driver from the demolished cab of the overturned truck.

A quick but careful examination showed that he was bleeding profusely from a severed artery in his right arm and from cuts on the face and body. Having a standard first-aid kit with them, the telephone men applied a tourniquet to the artery and treated the larger cuts with compresses and bandages. A fast train took the victim to a hospital in Louisville, seventeen miles away, where he eventually recovered.

La Grange newspapers, commenting on the accident, said: "It is said that the boy would have died on the spot had he not received the treatment from the well-trained first-aid men of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company."

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1929, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 34

Imagination certainly comes in at Auction Bridge. But it must be cultivated, curbed and restrained, tempered by knowledge, reason, and deduction.

The brilliant player uses his imagination. He forms swift mental pictures of the cards he cannot see. He visualizes them. Coupled with intuition, which is often an accompaniment of the imaginative faculty, amazing results are produced. It is almost as if the player, in some uncanny fashion, can see through the backs of the cards.

There are many excellent players who will never be quite first-class because they are devoid of imagination. They make few mistakes. But they plod on where the card genius SOARS. They play by rule of thumb, but they are never "inspired." In fact they frequently rather resent the idea that there is more in Auction Bridge than skill and knowledge—a psychic quality which cannot be explained exactly.

Failure in imagination is a fault of most weak players. They cannot IMAGINE that their partners are silent because they like the opponents' call, and they blunder into some silly bid of their own instead of leaving well alone. They cannot IMAGINE that a good "No-Trump" bid may be had as support of a suit call, and they are equally at fault because they cannot IMAGINE that their partners may have a good business double although it does not fit their own hands. The unimaginative Bridge player is one who cannot conceive possibilities beyond his own cards.

On the other side are players who have too much imagination or in whom the quality runs riot.

We all have experience of partners who imagine their hands are better than they are, or who are led to bid by secondary calls, or to double on the strength of them.

It was to a player of this type that the peppery colonel administered a rebuke. He had doubled unsuccessfully. His partner, the colonel, had called "Three hearts" on seven to the queen jack, on the second round.

He explained: "I thought, sir, you had the ace or king of your suit."

"Thought," said the colonel, "you didn't think. You IMAGINED it, and you had no right to imagine it."

Here is a clever little end play that should be interesting for our readers. Try your powers as a solver before you read the solution that follows:

End Play Example

Hearts — 9, 7, 4
Clubs — 10
Diamonds — none
Spades — 10

Hearts — J, 10, 6 Clubs — 7 Diamonds — none Spades — 7	Y A B Z	Hearts — 8, 5 Clubs — A Diamonds — none Spades — J, 8

Hearts — A
Clubs — 6
Diamonds — 9
Spades — 6, 5

Clubs are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win three of the five tricks against any defense?

Solution: At trick one Z should lead the ace of hearts, the other players following suit. At trick two Z should lead the nine of diamonds. A either can (a) trump or (b) discard the seven of spades. (a) If A trumps, Y should refuse to overtrump and should discard the ten of spades. B should discard the eight of hearts. At trick three A should lead the jack of hearts. Y follows suit, B should discard the eight of spades and Z should trump with the six of clubs. At trick four Z should lead the six of spades and Y should trump with the ten of clubs. Played in this way Y Z must win three of the five tricks.

(b) Suppose A discards the seven of spades at trick two. Y should discard the ten of spades and B is forced to trump with the ace of clubs. At trick three B must lead either a spade or a heart and in either case Y and Z must each make a trump trick. Played in this way also, Y Z must win three of the five tricks.

Answer to Problem No. 28

Hearts — none
Clubs — A
Diamonds — A, 10, 7
Spades — A

Hearts — Q Clubs — none Diamonds — Q, 9 Spades — 10, 8	Y A B Z	Hearts — A Clubs — 6 Diamonds — 6, 5, 4 Spades — none

Hearts — K
Clubs — 10
Diamonds — none
Spades — J, 9, 5

Hearts are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win four of the five tricks against any defense?

Solution: At trick one Z should lead the king of hearts and discard the ace of clubs from Y's hand. (Please note reason for this discard). B must win this trick with the ace of hearts and at trick two has the choice of leading a club or a diamond. The diamond lead up to Y's ten ace in diamonds will give the balance of the tricks to Y, so B's only alternative is the lead of the six of clubs. Z wins this trick with the ten of clubs (the reason now appears for the discard of the ace of clubs at trick one. If Y had not discarded this ace, he could have been placed in the lead at trick two and thus obliged to give A one diamond trick).

A is now forced to discard and has the choice of two evils, (a) the discard of a diamond or (b) the discard of the eight of spades. As (a) the discard of a diamond makes all of Y's diamonds good, that play is a loser; so A is forced to (b) discard the eight of spades. Y is now forced to discard and is obliged to discard the ace of spades. If he doesn't, he will be placed in the lead at trick three and thus forced to give A one diamond trick. The discard of the ace, however, solves the difficulty for now Z's spades are good for the next three tricks.

This problem is noteworthy in that the correct solution depends on the discard of two aces from Y's hand.

PRIZE OFFERS FOR SCHOOL WORK AT FAIR

Educational Displays To Break All Records At Exposition

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, June 5—(UP)—School children of Redwood City will have an opportunity to compete for a total of $7,500 in cash prizes, in addition to many trophies and medals, at the school exhibit competition at the California State Fair and Western Exposition August 30 to September 7.

In making this announcement, Ellis Franklin, director in charge of the fair's education department, urged that schools of the state take steps immediately to obtain display space as well as cards and entry blanks for the competition. These may be had by addressing Mrs. Jane Amundsen, superintendent of the educational department at the state fair grounds, Sacramento.

Many California schools have already reserved space, Franklin stated, the applications ranging from the largest cities in the state to small and remote country districts .

"We are extremely anxious this year—the 80th anniversary of California's admission into the union—to break all records with respect to the educational displays," Franklin said. "We hope to have every city and country represented with displays from its schools.

"In recent years the educational department has grown into one of the greatest and most valuable features of the State Fair. No other state in the country can equal the school exhibits at California's state fair.

"The state department of education is extending its heavy co-operation because it apreciates the fact that visual demonstrations given through these displays is a most important aid to educational advancement throughout the state.

"With the increased interest of the schools, we will be able to make this feature of California's great annual exposition even larger and better than in past years."

Protection of Property Costs Show Increase

County Pays $118,196.00 During Year For Protection

By HOMER L. ROBERTS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, June 5—(UP)—The average citizen of California little realizes the tremendous sum it costs his county annually to protect his person and property.

1930 census has already shown this state to have a larger population gain than any other state in the union. But more people means more crime. More crime means that the taxpayer must dig a little deeper into his pockets to pay the bill.

San Mateo county paid a total of $118,196 last year to protect its citizens and their property, according to a tabulation just completed. This represents one of the most expensive phases of county government.

The 58 counties of California expended during the 12-month period a grand total of $14,522,618 for protection, as compared with $14,110,772 for the year 1928.

Sheriff's offices, which handle the job of hunting and catching criminals, often involving travel to distant states to return fugitives for trial, account for the heaviest share of the protection cost. Sheriffs in California last year paid a total of $2,703,579 to administer their offices.

Among other county functions included in the classification of "protection" are: Constable, maintenance of county jail and care of criminals, county recorder's office, public administrator, inspection of livestock, bees, oil wells, weights and measures, horticultural commissioner, farm advisor, game warden, forest and fire prevention, bounties on coyotes, mountain lions, etc., and compensation insurance.

Los Angeles county accounted for more than half of the state's entire protection bill, with a total of $8,464,005. No division is made between city and county for San Francisco, which shows a total cost of $8,190,973. Alameda county's total for the year was $755,251.

KIWANIANS HEAR TALK BY R. R. COMMISSIONER

Members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club were given an interesting talk Wednesday on the workings of the California Railroad Commission by Commissioner Ezra Decoto. He told of the manner in which the commission is divided into departments and of the work of each of these departments.

The chairman of the meeting Wednesday was City Manager Ernest A. Rolison.

Last evening a number of the members of the Redwood City club went to the East Oakland club, where they put on the meeting for that club. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. C. H. Stevens, pastor of the First Congregational church of this city. He spoke on the topic of the "Go-Getter."

Women are welcoming the all-electric kitchen

Electricity heats water for 1/2 to 1/3 cent per gallon

WOMEN appreciate the cleanliness and the convenience of the all-electric kitchen. These are two reasons why almost every one of our customers today who is selecting an electric range is also selecting an automatic electric water heater.

Heating water with electricity is practical. Many electric water heaters installed for P. G. and E. customers, over 10 years ago, are still supplying dependable hot water service.

Another reason why women like the automatic electric water heater is that it offers flexibility in operation—

1. You may operate the heater manually — Turn the switch and heat the quantity of water desired and then turn the switch off. This is the most economical method.

2. You may turn the switch on in the morning and leave the heater operate automatically during the day and then turn the switch off for the afternoon or evening.

3. You may leave the switch on all the time and enjoy hot water 100% automatically — day and night. You'll have plenty of hot water at the turn of the faucet. Still, you will never have to watch the heater.

Automatic electric water heaters come complete with insulated storage tank. Or if you like, you can obtain the automatic heater without the tank and attach the heater to your present tank.

Buried Treasure

A sure sign of spring is a new story about buried treasure. Simon Lake, veteran inventor of undersea apparatus, comes forth with the announcement that he is going to search Long Island sound, in the vicinity of Hell Gate, for $4,000,000 in gold that was to have paid off the British army during the Revolutionary war. When Lake was a boy a certain Captain Thomas looked up war records and learned that a British pay ship wrecked itself on Pot Rock in Hell Gate in 1783. Thomas spent a fortune trying to salvage the gold some forty years ago, but he never found a trace of the British ship.

Skyscraper Mice

In recent weeks several tremendous skyscrapers have been thrown open in the Grand Central zone, and from some of the office space renters I have found that the chief trouble with a new 50-story building is mice. Plain, kitchen-and-basement variety mice. It takes several weeks of work to make a newly opened building safe for stenographers. The stenographers, resourceful girls that they are, have evolved a neat method of catching office mice. At closing time a girl empties the paper from a wastebasket and places in the receptacle a piece of cheese. The basket is placed near a chair, so that an ambitious mouse may clamber up a rung and peer into it. The mouse spies the cheese, and hops into the basket—and there it is. It can't climb up the steel sides.

Autographs Up to Date

I ran up against a new fad the other day—or at least it was new to me. I had occasion to visit an aviator friend who was in a bad smashup and had been for weeks in a plaster cast. When I was about to leave, he drew forth a fountain pen and said:

"Your John Henry, please."

"What do you mean?" I asked, puzzled.

"Sign here, on this cast," he answered. "It's my autograph album."

I found the names of dozens of visitors written on the plaster cast. Among them were the names of Clarence Chamberlin and others known to fame.

"I'll save this cast to remind me of the pleasant part of hospital life," said the sufferer.

Not a bad philosophy, that.

Law Keeps Out United States Soldier

Detroit.—James Cooper Harper, who for seven years has worn the uniform of the United States army, is now pondering the peculiarities of nations. Disclaimed by the United States and facing deportation by Canada, he wonders what sort of a welcome would await him in his native hills of Scotland.

The rules of immigration authorities work in a mysterious way and therein lie all of Harper's troubles. He came to Canada from Scotland in 1923 and two weeks later crossed to Buffalo, where he enlisted in the Fourteenth United States infantry. He served three years in Panama, returned, was honorably discharged and immediately re-enlisted.

On March 18 Harper was stationed at Fort Wayne awaiting transfer to service in China and he decided he would like one more look at British soil. Wearing his uniform he crossed to Windsor and passed two hours there. On his way back his feet found the pitfall that had awaited him for seven years. The United States immigration officers learned his story and sent him back to Canada. They told Canadian officers that he should be returned to Scotland.

A Canadian board of inquiry decided, in consideration of the oath he took when he entered the United States army, that Harper should be returned to the United States.

In the meantime this Scotch-American soldier is a prisoner, waiting for such justice as may be meted out to him. He has decided that he doesn't want to return to the United States if the United States doesn't want him. He has offered to enlist in the Canadian army, but the suggestion was not warmly received.

There are no wars now, there is no "thin red line o' 'eroes," and the services of a good soldier are now going begging.

MAKING LIFE TOO EASY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Sumner almost raised a riot in our neighborhood a few years ago because of the treatment of his young son who had reached the mature age of four and who Sumner thought should have gained some respect for the law and order of the family. The road in front of the Sumner house was not paved. In the spring the mud on the thoroughfare was well nigh bottomless, and Sumner had warned his son to keep to the walk. But the young American was full of adventure, and wandering out into the street, mired in the soft loam and began calling lustily for help. Sumner sitting on his front porch saw his son struggling to extricate himself from the mud, but he gave no aid.

"He has gotten himself into the difficulty," he explained, "he may get out the best way he can. It isn't a good thing to make life too easy."

Seeing that he was left to his own devices, the boy stopped crying and pulled himself out of the mire. He was taught a good lesson, but the neighbors were scandalized at the cruelty of the unsympathetic parent.

If I should be asked to give an opinion as to what is the matter with the young people of today it would be that life is being made too easy for many of them. They are asked to make no sacrifices, they come up against no real hardships, they know little about early rising and hard work and doing without things. Their pathway is carefully smoothed by father and mother and grandmother and maiden aunts. Every stone is removed from their path, and the activities of life are all graded down to a dead level.

"I don't want my son to go through what I went through," father explains. "We want John to have every advantage," mother announces, and so the boy has an easy road, and turns out too often soft and selfish and easily discouraged when he comes up against difficulty.

We have a rule at the institution where I do business that students may not drive automobiles excepting in cases of real necessity. Simon came to see me last year concerning his son, a lazy hulk who was just barely passing his work.

"Why should he have the car?" I asked.

"Well, he lives so far away from the campus," he explained, "and he is sometimes late to class from not getting up in time."

"How far?" I inquired.

"Oh, four or five blocks."

I shook my head. He thought a minute and then seemed resigned to his refusal.

"Well, he can call a taxicab if he doesn't feel like walking that far," he said. He was making it pretty easy, I thought.

Our young people have too many fur coats, too many silk stockings, too soft beds to lie on. They shy too often from hardship and things that are difficult and unpleasant. Parents forget that they grow strong only from struggle and the life that is made too easy is generally weak and inefficient.

Friction Ignites Comb When Schoolboy Falls

Corona, Calif.—Slipping and falling while crossing the schoolroom, Stuart Clayson, pupil at a school here, suffered no apparent injury and, taking his seat, began studying. Almost immediately he felt a burning sensation. At first he thought it the after effects of the fall but as the pain increased he saw smoke curling around him. Hurried investigation showed a celluloid comb in his back pocket had been ignited, presumably by friction, as he slid across the floor in his fall. Before the blaze could be extinguished the boy was burned severely.

Officials of Iowa Town Furnish Their Own Music

Beaman, Iowa.—This town will have a band and, for the first time in years, will not be forced to import musicians. Mayor Wier, who took office early in April, settled the music problem of the city when he impressed Charles Rowe and R. L. Oglesby, members of the city council, into service to drum while he fired.

Youth Hated Dogs So He Starts Annihilation

Canton, Ohio.—Because he hated dogs, Leroy Nichols, eighteen, proceeded to kill all the canines that crossed his path. After he had sent the spirits of 12 into dogland, irate owners caused his arrest. To authorities Leroy confided he "simply didn't like dogs."

WOMAN FOR GOVERNOR

Mrs. Jessie W. Nicholson of Chevy Chase, Md., president of the National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement league as well as of the Maryland organization, who will run against Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in the next gubernatorial contest.

Hatched in Air

Croydon, England.—When an air freighter arrived at Croydon Airdrome from the Continent several chicks had been hatched during the flight from a consignment of incubator eggs.

"Willy-Nilly" Bugaboo of English Airmen

London.—Have you heard of the "willy-nilly?" It is no cousin of "Penny-Annie."

Nor is it a catch question or ask me another, but a phenomenon sometimes encountered by airplane pilots when flying over the Mediterranean. It is a storm, a true freak of nature.

The dictionary defines "willy-nilly" as uncertain. Ask a pilot what his definition is and he is most likely to reply "It's awful."

It can best be described as an area of about 400 yards long and 100 yards wide of thick, dense rain, but rain which ascends in place of descending. It is really a close relative of a water spout, being blown or sucked up from the surface of the sea.

Severe "willy-nilles" may even contain seaweed and small pieces of wreckage. One of these odd storms, thus far encountered only over the Mediterranean, may ascend to a height of 300 or 400 feet.

Task of Harnessing Columbia Is Started

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Columbia is an aged horse but a colt in power. This spring the first attempt ever made to harness this mighty stream for industrial use will start near here with a station capable of producing 84,000 horsepower. Over 2,500 men will soon be employed for a three-year term in building a dam to impound a lake twenty-two miles long and 100 feet deep.

Must Find Bride to Receive Legacy

Albany, N. Y.—Frank Hofelich, twenty, young Rensselaer concrete contractor, who will receive $20,000 at his marriage, is in the market for a bride—preferably a young, vivacious brunette.

This was revealed when Hofelich announced to his friends he had broken off his acquaintance with "the only girl"—the girl that up to a month ago he planned to give the benefit of his money.

They had quarreled, but about what, Hofelich was reluctant to say.

It all started back in 1928 when he was a corporal in the Tenth infantry, New York National Guard, at Camp Smith, Peekskill. John Sommers, rich New York real estate broker, stopped his car near Corporal Hofelich and a companion at a spring by the roadside. Sommers left his car and knelt to drink.

Suddenly a rattlesnake, disturbed from his sun bath, struck at Sommers and bit him on the wrist.

With his military training, Corporal Hofelich was able to apply first aid. He cut the wound, sucked the poison from the man's arm and applied a tourniquet. Sommers' life was saved.

Hofelich thought nothing more of the incident until June, 1929, when he was notified by a New York lawyer that he had been bequeathed $20,000, which he would receive when he married.

Sommers, a bachelor himself, had asked Corporal Hofelich when he intended to marry, after his rescue. Hofelich had told him some day.

Hofelich had "one best girl" until February of this year, when they "broke off" because of what he terms a childish dispute.

The fortunate girl who will share his $20,000, he said, may be either a blond or brunette, preferably a brunette, but she must be of the vivacious type.

The annual pay roll in Texas of the common carrier bus and truck industry totals about $29,000,000.

Planning for Record Skyscraper

A 105-story building in Wall street, New York, is occupying the attentions of Louis Adler (left), president of the Louis Adler Realty corporation, who is shown going over blueprints with his general manager, Julius Fishman. Adler, who has just purchased an entire block in the world-famous street of finance, is believed to be the only individual ever to make so large a purchase in this thoroughfare.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Formation of Coal

When we burn wood in such a manner that little air gets to it, we have an almost all-carbon product—charcoal. Exactly in this way did mother nature produce our coal. Millions of years' accumulations of leaves and vegetable matter and the resulting weight, together with the earth's heat, turned this matter into coal. However, more gas is retained in coal than in charcoal.

Sights We Hope to See

Friendly Feeling for Birds That Kill Snakes

All over South Africa the secretary bird is protected by law and custom. In the stomach of one secretary bird were found three snakes, each about a yard long, eleven lizards, and a quantity of crickets and locusts. The bird has no hesitation in attacking a cobra or any poisonous snake. It comes up quietly, then, opening its wings to shield its body, flashes upon the snake and usually kills or disables it before it can strike. If the snake does manage to strike, the blow is caught upon one of the wings, then the bird's beak and feet finish the business. Before eating its prey, the bird plucks out the feather which was struck.

In South America the cariama, a prettily crested bird, much smaller than the secretary, kills snakes. Australia's snake killer is the laughing jackass, of which there are several kinds. The bird is a saucy creature and a bit of a thief. But since it kills and eats snakes it is protected and encouraged.

Texan Was Figuring on Journey Across Ocean

Battery C, One Hundred Twenty-ninth artillery, was ready to leave Camp Mills for the long trip across. We were to be taken from camp to the transport on a flat-bottom ferry boat and we were crowded on with full packs and just enough room to stand. After about an hour of the two-hour ride had passed I felt some one punching me in the back. Turning around, I saw a long, lank Texas recruit behind me.

"What do you want?" I asked him.

"Say, how long did you say it would take us to go across?" he asked me.

"Oh, about ten days or two weeks," I told him.

He just blinked his eyes a few times and shifted his full pack a little before saying, "Oh, boy! This is sure going to be a h—l of a tiresome trip."—L. H. Cunningham, in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, old Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today the same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any drugstore.

Chicken a Songster

George W. Vaught, of Kenilworth, Ill., called at the village manager's office to protest against a notice he had received calling attention to a local ordinance against keeping chickens. "I am not keeping chickens," he said. "But it is true that I have a chicken; it's a pet and I claim we have as much right to have it as a neighbor has to have a canary bird. It is a musical chicken and we keep her merely as a vocalist and interpreter of songs. When my wife plays on the piano or the violin the chicken sings. And she is off pitch much less than a lot of grand opera stars I've had to listen to. We call her Chicken Patti."—Indianapolis News.

A la Radio

Conrad and Bobby, three and eleven, are ardent followers of basketball, and each evening try their powers at looping the ball into the basket in their basement. Conrad has learned the popular lingo from the radio announcers, and his little voice rings clear: "He's dribbling down the floor; he shoots, misses; he gets the ball; shoots—and it went!"

Absend-Minded

Billy was a very absent-minded little boy. One cold morning his mother sent him to school well bundled up, even to his galoshes.

When he appeared at his desk his teacher was quite unsprised at his appearance. She asked him:

"How did you happen to come to school today without your shirt?"

Billy looked himself over from his neck to his feet and exclaimed:

"Gee, gosh! I thought I took off my galoshes."

Spices and Pilgrims

About 28,000 Mohammedan pilgrims from the Netherland East Indies made the pilgrimage to Mecca during the last three months of last year. The number of visitors from the rubber districts, where prices were uncertain, was smaller than usual, while the number from the coffee and spice districts, where prices were good, was greater. The total from the two districts made up the normal pilgrimage from the islands.

"I Feel Like a New Person"

Rights of Way For Street Extensions Promised to C. of C.

Announcement was made here this week by Howard I. Wood, secretary-manager of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, that rights of way are being secured from the Tacoma Mill Company for the extension of at least three streets across the land of the mill company to join with the Bayshore highway. It is hoped, Wood stated, to have these streets ready when the highway is completed to Redwood City.

The streets, which it is expected, are Brewster, Webster, and Washington. These are all important streets to the business section of the town. Other streets will also be extended to join with the Bayshore road.

Negotations for the rights of way from the Tacoma Mill Company were made by a committee consisting of County Assessor Dan Flynn, Mayor D R Stafford, and City Engineer Charles Dimmit. This was a sub-committee appointed by a committee of the chamber of commerce, of which Carl Wagner was chairman and E. B. Hinman, Dave Walter, and the three members of the sub-committee were members.

Facts About the Telephone

A total of 13,000 surgeons are listed in New York City's classified telephone directory.

Telephone service has been inaugurated between Czechoslovakia and Finland.

The first commercial telephone exchange in the United States was established at Bridgeport, Conn., in 1878.

The new building of the Baltimore Trust Company which was completed in November contains more wire for telephone connections than any structure in the State, other than a telephone building.

The 50,000th telephone in the city of Syracuse, N. Y., was installed the other day, just fifty years after the first telephone exchange was established in the city with sixteen subscribers.

When Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson desired to give Charles G. Dawes, United States ambassador to Great Britain, the result of the conference of naval experts on disarmament and to receive from him an important communication from Premier MacDonald this past summer, he made use of the transatlantic telephone service.

LONGEST WAY AROUND IS SHORTEST TO BELLAIRE

A telephone call from the New York Times to Bellaire in Queens County, Greater New York, was made possible the other day by means of a message radioed to the Byrd Expedition in the Antarctic some 10,000 miles away.

F. E. Meinholtz, manager of the New York Times radio station, was sitting in his home listening to a press dispatch being flashed through the air by one of the operators aboard Byrd's ship, the City of New York, when suddenly he heard this message, "Meinholtz, the Times wants you to hang up your telephone receiver so it can call you on the phone."

A Times operator was sending messages to the Eleanor Bolling, which receives all radio messages for the Byrd Expedition, while the other ship, the City of New York, does the radio broadcasting, the two vessels being connected by a radio telephone. When the New York Times operator found he could not get his chief on the telephone he injected a request into his message going out. This request, in turn, was relayed by the operator of the Eleanor Bolling to the City of New York and the operator there then inserted it in his press dispatch to the North, with the result that Meinholtz received the call from Times Square to Bellaire, a distance of twelve miles, by way of the Antarctic.

EDITORIAL SPOTLIGHT

RESEARCH IMPROVES TELEPHONE SERVICE—Corning (N. Y.) Leader.

The American telephone industry is carrying on an extensive research program toward the goal of furnishing better, wider and cheaper service. This includes trans-oceanic communication, television, etc.

Loud-speakers and talking motion pictures resulted from research that was designed to improve telephone service.

The public knows little of this research. But behind every telephone call, every progressive step in the art of communication, are thousands of laboratory workers whose duty it is to provide the public with constant improving service.
